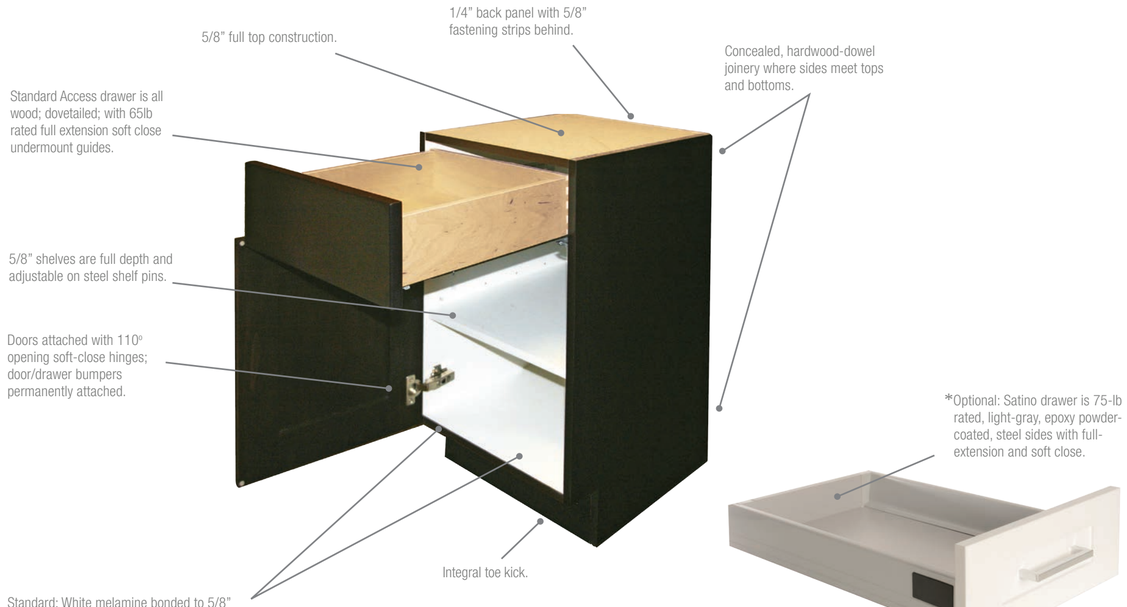
1600 CABINET CONSTRUCTION



White Melamine | Maple Melamine* | Gray Melamine* | Birch Plywood*

BELLMONT 1600 FEATURED WOOD SPECIES

Bellmont 1600 wood doors are constructed with character grade hardwoods. Depending upon the species, this grade could randomly exhibit mineral streaks, slight color variation, pin knots, and sap wood. These are naturally occurring characteristics of all hardwoods, and are not considered defective or inferior. Mid to darker tone stains will mask some of these mild variations, whereas a natural or clear finish will expose the wood's full grain and character.

Native to the Pacific Northwest, Alder has fine, smooth, straight grain with random mineral streaks and mild color variation. Even though it is classified as a hardwood, Alder is slightly softer than woods such as Cherry or Oak; an excellent wood choice for most door styles and colors.

One of the denser and harder of common cabinet woods, Maple shows tight smooth grain patterns. Common to Maple is the occasional dark mineral streak and mild color variation. Maple tends to yellow with age and light exposure. Good for light toned traditional or contemporary cabinetry.

Associated with fine furniture for centuries, Cherry is an eastern grown hardwood that exhibits fine, tight grain and mild color variation. Small random pin holes or pitch pockets are common. Cherry darkens with age turning reddish brown in overall tone. Darker stains mask the color change.

Oak is known for its coarse texture, predominant contrasting grain patterns, pin knots, and overall hardness. Color variations of light brown to reddish brown are typical and show the most with light or natural finishes. Oak is a timeless American classic wood.

* Also available in Rustic Alder which will exhibit random knots and grain variation.

FINISHES

BELLMONT finishes are created to provide long-lasting durability and ease of maintenance. Stains are hand applied with multi-step processes and protected with multiple coats of clear, catalyzed-conversion varnish in your choice of matte or satin sheen.

GLAZING PROCESS

Glazing is a hand-rubbed, contrast-color application process that provides an old-world or 'antiqued' finish by accentuating open grain and details on stained wood. Glazing is only applied to the front surfaces of doors and drawer fronts; the back side of doors and drawer fronts will only have the base stain color or paint and clear top coating. Due to the hand-applied processes, the final finished appearance may vary slightly from the sample.
